About Bank Mandiri
Bank Mandiri is currently Indonesia's largest bank (both largest lender and depository). The bank was founded in late 1998 as a result of a government-led restructuring process of the country’s banking industry. It was formed with the merger of four state-owned banks: Bank Bumi Daya, Bank Dagang Negara, Bank Exim and Bapindo. With assets of over US$60 billion, it is currently in Stage 2 of its transformation programme, an ambitious growth effort to become amongst the Top 5 ASEAN banks by 2014 by focusing on retail, corporate and commercial banking. It also has major subsidiaries that are involved in Islamic banking, investment banking, micro-banking and insurance.
