Re: Government's Responsibility to Ensure Divestment from Agua Zarca Dam in Honduras

Amsterdam, 14 March 2016

Dear Minister Ploumen,

You have committed to defend the legacy and struggle of Berta Caceres.¹ Her struggle as a prominent human rights defender was to protect the rights of the Lenca people from harmful development projects, specifically the Agua Zarca project, financed amongst others by the Dutch Development Bank (FMO). The undersigned organizations join together with the Civic Council of Popular and Indigenous Organisations of Honduras (COPINH)² to call on the Dutch government to assume its responsibility and direct FMO to withdraw its support from the Agua Zarca project.

FMO knew or should have known at the time of its investment in 2014 that the Agua Zarca project had the potential to result in conflict and violence. Just a year earlier, a soldier killed Tomás García, one of Berta's colleagues, during a protest against the project. The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights had issued precautionary measures for Berta herself as result of the aggression, criminalization, threats and intimidation she faced over many years.³ That should have alerted FMO to the serious risks facing human rights defenders in Honduras, especially those working on environmental and natural resource rights.⁴ They should have also been aware of the failure of the Government of Honduras to protect the rights of indigenous peoples.⁵ The project was not being developed in a vacuum. It was being developed in an environment in which it was impossible for FMO's environmental and social policies to be implemented adequately. As recently as a few weeks ago, and despite changes in the design of the project, Berta and over 100 people protested the project, but their peaceful protest was met with repression by security forces.⁶ If there was still a question before, now Berta's murder demonstrates unequivocally that this project cannot be developed without further violence.

Neither is this an isolated incident. FMO's other investments in Honduras, Central America and elsewhere have similarly generated conflict, division, and at times violence. FMO's investment in Banco Ficohsa is linked to violence in the Bajo Aguán valley of Honduras as a result of the operations of Dinant and other large palm oil companies.⁷ The Santa Rita dam⁸ and the Barillas Santa Cruz dam⁹ in Guatemala and the Barro Blanco dam in Panamá, all affecting indigenous communities, have seen protests and retaliations. The findings of FMO's Independent Complaints Mechanism (ICM) in its investigation of the Barro Blanco dam echo the concerns raised in the Agua Zarca project. The ICM found that FMO did not have sufficient information about indigenous rights when it made its investment and had "not taken the resistance of the affected communities...seriously enough.”¹⁰

The Government of the Netherlands has an obligation under human rights law to ensure that its state-owned enterprises respect human rights in their operations. As a majority shareholder, it is responsible for the impacts of FMO’s investments and must exercise its authority to prevent further adverse impacts from occurring. There can and should be a time to discuss what policy changes are needed at FMO to ensure that future investments fully respect the rights of those affected, in particular the rights of indigenous peoples. But now, we call on the government to take the following immediate actions to ensure that it is no longer contributing to the conflict and violation of rights in Honduras:

- Direct FMO to divest from the Agua Zarca project;
- Direct FMO to conduct a portfolio review to determine whether it is directly or indirectly investing in any other project on Lenca territory;
- Use all diplomatic means at its disposal to ensure the safe return of Gustavo Castro, witness to Berta’s murder, to Mexico, as recommended by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of Human Rights Defenders;¹¹ and
- Urge the Honduran authorities to support a full and impartial independent investigation, one that involves international human rights organizations, that is coordinated by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, and pursues both material and intellectual authors of the crime.

We would welcome the opportunity to speak with you in further detail about our concerns. We are also communicating our concerns with the other investors in Agua Zarca, FinnFund and the Central American Bank for Economic Integration (CABEI), and asking them to divest.
